Administrative history / Biographical sketch

Note

Floyd Rinhart moved to Coral Gables, Florida, from New Jersey in September, 1923 at the age of seven. Floyd grew up on Giralda Avenue, a short distance from the Venetian Pool. Coached by Olympic legend and movie star Johnnie Weismuller, Floyd soon became a junior swimmer of note in Southern Florida. During summer vacations, Floyd travelled back to Asbury Park, New Jersey, to see family and friends. There he met Marion Hutchinson, and a childhood romance culminated in marriage in 1935. Following World War II, Floyd worked as an executive for Lindley Lumber Company. The Rinharts lived in a variety of Florida's east coast towns, and for a short time in St. Petersburg. Following a move to Deerfield Beach in 1955, the Rinharts developed a keen interest in the history of photography. They began to collect early American photography, and their extensive research led to the publication of American Daguerrian Art, in 1967, and American Miniature Case Art, in 1969. From 1964 to 1966, the Rinharts conducted their research in Washington, DC. Upon their return, the Rinharts moved to Floridiana Beach, a town some twenty miles north of Vero Beach. Floyd continued to work for the Lindley Lumber Company in Fort Pierce, some forty miles away. In 1978, the Rinharts moved to Athens, Georgia, where proximity to the University of Georgia allowed for continued research and the teaching of a two-week seminar in the Art Department. Throughout the years, the Rinharts have continued to write and publish on the history of photography. Ohio State University now houses the Rinharts' collection of early American photography. The University of Miami Library acquired a second collection, consisting of rare and historical photographs and images of Florida.

Scope and content

The Floyd and Marion Rinhart Photograph Collection consists of rare and historical photographs and images of Florida.

Series descriptions

Series id22169: Photogravures

Scope and content:

The first series contains a series of regional views of Florida, by the Art Photogravure Company of Racine, Wisconsin, 1904. A photogravure is created with the use of an intaglio copper plate, made from the original photograph , and printed like an engraving. This slow, hand-made process often produced a limited number of plates, as the plates are shallower and weaker than ordinary engravers' plates. The inks used in the printing process produce a "soft" appearance, that may be altered to achieve the artistic effect desired by the printer.

Series id22170: Photogravure Albums and Engraving

Scope and content:

This series contains an 1871 engraving by Robert Hinshelwood, a native of Scotland. He is best known for his landscape engravings, and this work is handtinted in colors appropriate for a work entitled, "on the Coast of Florida." The engraving measures 5.50"x9.00". Two photogravure albums, St. Augustine in Photo-Gravure, Portland, Maine: Chisholm Brothers, 1891; and Glimpses of Miami, Fla., Brooklyn, New York: Albertype Co., 1904, are now cataloged as publications within the Florida Collection. A listing of the individual images in these publications is provided.

Series id22171: Stereographs

Scope and content:

This third series contains a number of rare and unusual images of Florida. Stereographs, cards mounted with two paper prints of an image, became popular in the 1860s. These images, when viewed through a stereoscope, appeared three-dimensional. This lightweight, easy-to-use device spurred photographers to create numerous sets of images for distant lands and exotic places. Many important photographers travelled to Florida to capture such images, in the days before the state became recognized as a tourist and vacation destination. Among the photographers and publishers represented in this collection are E. and H.T. Anthony, George Barker, Charles Bierstadt, Alfred Campbell, W.H. Cushing, A.G. Grant, Isaac Haas, F.N. Hunton, William Leach, James A. Macdonald, Mangold and Sons, J.F. Mears, J.S. Mitchell, William H. Rau, A.F. Styles, C. Seaver, Jr., Charles Torrey, Benjamin P. Upton, Wilson and Havens, and others.
