Administrative history / Biographical sketch

---

Note

Juan Jose Remos y Rubio was a Cuban writer and government official. He distinguished himself as a professor and academic in Cuba, as well as working as an assessor for the government of Fulgencio Batista. Upon his exile from Cuba in 1960, he became a counterrevolutionary leader. He is the father of journalist Ariel Remos.

Scope and content

---

The Juan Jose Remos Papers contain the personal documents of Cuban journalist and politician Juan Jose Remos. They include clippings, correspondence, books on Cuban literature and poetry, booklets, scrapbooks, photographs, posters, and unpublished manuscripts. The clippings and written material are mostly collected from Remos' time in exile, written by him and others, detailing Cuban exile culture and political sentiment in Miami. Some material from Remos' time in the Cuban government, mostly photos and correspondence, is also available.
